

DBJ names 2022 honorees for Diversity in Business Awards

Jul 13, 2022, 9:30am EDT Updated: Jul 13, 2022, 12:36pm EDT

The Dayton Business Journal has named the honorees for the 2022 Diversity in Business Awards.

The awards recognize organizations that have contributed to harnessing diversity within their work forces and actively taking the lead to promote and champion the business case for diversity within the community or their industries.

They also honor individuals within the community or for-profit and nonprofit organizations who have shown outstanding initiative to promote diversity and inclusion either in the organization or community, making a positive difference in others' lives through contributions to social justice, equality and diversity.

JAKEOLIMB | GETTY IMAGES

The Dayton Business Journal has named the honorees for the 2022 Diversity in Business Awards.

Honorees will be recognized both in-print and online in our special awards section that publishes Aug. 19, as well at our awards event the evening of Thursday, Aug. 18.

Here are this year's honorees:

Outstanding Diversity Organization:

Parallax Advanced Research
CareSource
NCCJ of Greater Dayton
Girls on the Run

Outstanding Diversity Champion (Individual):

Bonnie Baker (Kettering Health)
Maya Dorsey (Learn to Earn Dayton)
Dennis Duncan (Sinclair Community College)
Subhashini Ganapathy (Wright State University)
Ivy Glover (Wright-Patt Credit Union)
Kathy Harper (Premier Health)
Barbara Johnson (Premier Health)
Belinda Stenson (Minority Business Partnership with the Dayton Area Chamber of Commerce)
Stephen Willis (KBR)

John E. Moore Sr. Lifetime Achievement Award for Racial Equity:

Michael Carter (Sinclair Community College)

Caleb Stephens

Editor-in-Chief

Dayton Business Journal

